

A young man with short brown hair, wearing a grey crew-neck sweater and dark trousers, is smiling broadly while using a stick vacuum cleaner in a bright, modern hallway. The hallway has white walls and a light-colored wooden floor. In the background, there are white doors and a window with light coming through. The vacuum cleaner is black and silver, with a green accent on the handle.

Who can get general housing allowance?

General housing allowance can be paid to one person or to a household of many persons.

A household means the people who live permanently in the same flat or house.

Usually a household is made up of a married or unmarried couple or a family.

One person can also be a household.

You may be able to get general housing allowance, if you live

- in a rented house or flat
- in your own flat in a housing company
- in your own single-family house
- in a right-of-occupancy home
- in a part-ownership home.

You can also get housing allowance for pensioners, housing supplement for students, and housing assistance for conscripts from Kela.

These benefits are described in separate brochures.

You can normally be paid only one form of housing benefit at a time.

For which housing costs can you get general housing allowance?

You can get housing allowance payments for such housing costs as:

- Rented home: rent plus water and heating costs
- A flat you own in a housing company: maintenance charge, interest on housing loans and water and heating costs
- A single-family house that you own: maintenance costs and interest on housing loans
- Right-of-occupancy home: residence charge, interest on housing loans and water and heating costs
- Part-ownership home: rent plus water and heating costs.

Water and heating charges are accepted as housing costs if you pay them separately and on top of the rent or maintenance charge.

Water charges of up to 20 euros per person and per month are accepted.

For single-person households the maximum amount of heating charges accepted is 66 euros per month.

If the household consists of more than one person, 22 euros is added in heating costs for each additional person.

If you live in a single-family house, the water and heating costs as well as the other expenses of living in a single-family house are considered acceptable maintenance costs.

The amount of acceptable maintenance costs is specified by law.

If you have a housing loan, 73 percent of the interest charged on the loan is accepted as housing costs.

How much general housing allowance can you get?

Housing allowance can be at most 80% of your housing costs. This means that you always pay at least 20% of your housing expenses yourself.

The housing allowance does not cover all housing costs. It only covers acceptable housing costs as specified by law.

The maximum amount of housing costs on the basis of which you can get housing allowance is also specified by law.

If your housing costs exceed the maximum limit for housing costs, you can only get housing allowance up to the maximum amount.

The maximum acceptable costs depend on the number of adults and children living in the same home and on the municipality in which the home is located.

Location of the home

Finnish municipalities are divided into four groups according to the cost of living there.

The first group consists of Helsinki and nothing else. It has the highest cost of living, so a bigger housing allowance is available there.

The second group includes

- Espoo
- Kauniainen
- Vantaa.

The third group includes

- Hyvinkää
- Hämeenlinna
- Joensuu
- Jyväskylä
- Järvenpää
- Kajaani
- Kerava
- Kirkkonummi
- Kouvola
- Kuopio
- Lahti
- Lappeenranta
- Lohja
- Mikkeli
- Nokia
- Nurmijärvi
- Oulu
- Pori
- Porvoo
- Raisio
- Riihimäki
- Rovaniemi
- Seinäjoki
- Sipoo
- Siuntio
- Tampere
- Turku
- Tuusula
- Vaasa
- Vihti.

All other municipalities are in the fourth group, except the municipalities in the Åland Islands.

The municipalities in the Åland Islands form a group of their own.

Examples

Maija lives alone in a rented flat in Helsinki.
She pays 800 euros per month in rent.

Up to 582 euros per month can be accepted as housing costs for a person living alone in Helsinki.

This means that 582 euros is used as the basis of calculating her housing allowance.

The allowance is not calculated on the basis of her rent (800 euros).

Tommi lives alone as a subtenant in the city of Kemi.

He pays 291 euros per month in rent.

Up to 394 euros per month can be accepted as housing costs for a person living alone in Kemi.

Tommi's housing allowance is calculated on the basis of his rent (291 euros), because the rent is lower than the maximum amount of housing costs.

Basic deductible

Before the final amount of the housing allowance can be known, a basic deductible is subtracted from the housing costs.

Its size depends on

- the number of adults and children in the household
- the gross household income per month.

■ Gross income means income before taxes.

The bigger the income is, the larger the deductible.

If the income is very small, there is no basic deductible at all.

Income

The amount of the housing allowance is affected by

- earned income, for example wages or salaries (minus an earned-income deduction)
- capital income (for example rental income or interest on deposits)
- several social benefits, such as labour market subsidy, study grant, pensions and sickness allowance.

The amount of housing allowance is not affected by

- certain social benefits, such as social assistance, child benefit, provider supplement to the study grant, or informal care allowance
- student loan
- the income of a minor child who is a member of the household
- incidental income, such as a gift or an inheritance.

You must declare all of your income in the application for housing allowance.

Kela can also get information from the national incomes register on salaries paid to you.

Remember to tell Kela if your income increases or decreases.

Earned-income deduction

The earned-income tax deduction means that a sum of 300 euros per month is deducted from the total earned income of each household member.

This means that Kela does not take this sum into account when calculating the income that affects the housing allowance.

The deduction can be made from wage and salary income, self-employment income and farm income.

See Kela's website for more information about how income affects the amount of the housing allowance.

How is housing allowance calculated?

The housing allowance is calculated as follows:

First, the basic deductible is subtracted from the housing costs.

The housing allowance is equal to 80 percent of the remaining amount.

You can use a calculator on Kela's website to estimate the amount of housing allowance that may be available to you.

www.kela.fi/calculators

Example

Jaakko lives alone in a rental home, which is located in Turku. He pays 700 euros per month in rent.

Jaakko's income before taxes is 742 euros per month.

Because Jaakko's income is small, there is no basic deductible.

Up to 447 euros per month can be accepted as Jaakko's housing costs.

The housing allowance is calculated on the basis of the maximum amount of housing costs.

It is not calculated on the basis of Jaakko's rent (700 euros).

The housing allowance that Jaakko gets is equal to 80 percent of his maximum housing costs, or $447 \text{ euros} \times 0.80 = 357.60 \text{ euros}$ per month.

Jaakko pays 342.40 euros per month himself ($700 \text{ euros} - 357.60 \text{ euros} = 342.40 \text{ euros}$).
